

The Arc of D.C. is excited to partner with DC VOICE to find out if D.C. Public Schools will be ready for its students when schools open in August.

Sign up to be a Ready Schools volunteer and find out!

The DC Voice Ready School Project conducts community audits of all D.C. Public Schools. It involves interviewing local school principals to see if the necessary supports for high quality teaching and learning are in place for when schools open in the fall. Volunteering involves a short training session during the last two weeks of August and a school visit as part of a team during the month of September – a total of about three hours of volunteer time.
